

Main Session 19.2

Do You Know What I've Done?

- We are not the sum of our worst moments and our biggest mistakes

Mike Foster

- "There are two paths, we can use our pain from our past to either destroy our own lives or to help heal the world."
- "As leaders who are working with students, reminding people of the possibilities. and their setbacks can be their superpower"
- "Use your story to leverage on the behalf of others. "
- "Everyone wants to be loved and feel like they belong. We bought into the lie that when people see the real me, i'll be rejected and out of the tribe. "
- "When we are holding space with people (see, sit and listen with people, to hear every aspects), we get excited and hijack with our own pain."

Nona Jones - Facebook - Faith Based Partnerships

- "Pain into purpose, it is not meant for us just to suffer, but there is a purpose."

@dhariusdaniels

What matters to you as a leader will matter to those who follow you.

Your presence on this planet has purpose

"Not only do we have purpose, but so does the next generation. "

You are not youth workers. This isn't an issue of semantic, language matters it frames the way we frame things. We can't accomplish things accurately if we don't understand it appropriately. Language does matter. You are not youth workers, you are purpose partners."

"Your purpose is help the next generation to figure out theirs"

You have made the decision to get personal for the purpose of purpose.

Purpose is the reason for the creation. Calling is an invitation to your purpose

Part of our purpose is to help others discover theirs.

Doesn't see others as an interruption but an appointment that wasn't on the calendar.

In different seasons, different voices have different values.
